

June 18, 1943

Dear Ma,

I just got home from the office and found a letter from Jennie. She tells me that Newman met Farkas and told him about Aunt Rose and Farkas said that he is going to get a lawyer and collect the insurance. I'm not worried about that part of it but when you meet or see Newman, you better tell him to keep his mouth shut and not make any more trouble or else I'll really make it bad for him. I'm so darn mad that I just can't control myself. Can you imagine the nerve of that Farkas, even daring to show his face?

I just wanted to tell you all of this before you talk to him because not doubt, he 'll twist the story all around. Tony hasn't as yet written. I've been writing to him very regulary tho. How are all of you feeling? Hope Lenke is much better by this time.

Next week, I'm definitely sending you that package. I was quite tired this week after coming home from work but will take care of it. Hope the folks are fine. When did you see Sam? I just feel like writing that Newman some nasty letter for not minding his damn business. He didn't mind it when it was his and when it was his duty to and now when its too late, he is making lots of talk and trouble.

Hope you don't mind this messy letter but I'm very upset and very disgusted with people in general. Guess I'm just a little nervous yet. I'll get over it. Try to write soon.

Love,